STATE SAFETY WARNS AGAINST GRASS FIRES

The continued hot, dry weather is not only cutting down the potential crop production of the state but the danger from grass and woodland fires poses a real threat to the livestock feed that Mrs. E. R. Taylor is produced on the pastures and ranges. This forage is needed in Albuquerque now as never before not only to Funeral services for Mrs. E. fires now could practicaly wipe out many range plant species.

Farm Bureau Federation and E. buquerque C. Martin of the Agricultural Extension Service strongly urges long illness. She had lived at doubly careful with fire as long months. The agricultural leaders point out that the livestock industry of the state is basically dependent upon grasslands for its existence and with livestock prices what they are at the present, every producer must depend more than ever on grass to keep down costs. A blackened range caused by the carelessness could be the final blow that would put a producer or producers out of business. On June 1, the Bureau of Agricultural Economics reported the condition of range and pasture feed in Texas as 75 percent of normalthe lowest reported condition on this date since 1925. This fact is all the more reason, say the It's Simple As leaders, why range and pasture fires must be kept under control. In order to protect our cheapest source of livestock feed, the committee urges community and county groups to organize for the specific purpose of fighting grass fires. They believe the local neighborhood groups should be coordinated on a community and county basis so that if necessary, an effective fighting force could be gotten together in the shortest possible time in case of a major fire. All equipment should be inventoried so no time would be lost in getting the right equipment to a fire.

They point out that ranges and pastures should be protected with wire guards. Hazards that might cause fires should be eliminated. Glass bottles have started fires. They act as a magnifying glass and when the sun's rays reach the proper angle, almost any bot tle may concentrate the heat from the sun sufficiently to ignite dry

The 1953 Year Book of the Poetry Society of Texas is off the press and being distributed. It is an attractive booklet of 50 pages and is filled with matter of interest to all poetry lovers. Among the many items, such as society activities of the past year and plans for current procedures, there is an alphabetical list of the Society's several hunsympathizers with positions of dred members with their postoffice addresses. Hondo lists three members. The most interesting feature, however, is the published poems of the 29 prize winners of 1952. Besides these annual prizes, ranging from $100.00 down to $5.00, numerous monthly prizes are also given. It goes without saying that the Society is rendering a service of incalculable value members.
